Topic:

Understanding India's Infrastructure Market: Evolution, Opportunity and the Role of Private Capital

Date:

November 12, 2026
11:00 a.m. – 12:00 noon (CET)

As institutional investors seek new sources of diversification and long-term returns, Asia continues to play an increasingly important role within global alternative investment portfolios. This webinar will begin with an overview of current investor sentiment, allocation trends across private markets, and the growing importance of Asia in institutional portfolio construction.

The discussion will then focus on India and the remarkable evolution of its infrastructure investment landscape over the past decade. Attendees will gain insights into the structural reforms, regulatory developments and market dynamics that have transformed India into an increasingly institutional-quality investment market. The session will also explore common perceptions around currency risk, the role of private capital in supporting economic growth, and the opportunities emerging across infrastructure and energy transition sectors. Drawing on practical experience and market insights, the webinar will provide investors with a deeper understanding of how global institutions are approaching India today and how they can participate in one of the world's most compelling long-term infrastructure growth stories.
